Did You Know?

Our news team contributes to journalism beyond the day-to-day story mix. Many of your colleagues are shaping the future of journalism in other ways.

You may know that Terra Crowley chairs the Journalism Program Advisory Committee at Conestoga. Nadia Matos recently participated in a focus group for all Ontario journalism college programs. Several people on our news team have taught at regional journalism schools; Nadia teaches at Mohawk, and Melissa Durrell and Brent Hanson have each taught at Conestoga in the past year or two.

Outside the classroom, at least Trisha Owens and Melissa Durrell have agreed to mentor Conestoga journalism students. And, several of these people, including Nicole Lampa, Michael Melling and Joel Bowey, have agreed to mentor student internships being planned in the new year.

Of course, with so many people helping others into the fascinating career of journalism, it is likely someone also deserving credit hasn't been mentioned here. Thanks to everyone helping journalists of the future!

MY PLANE PASSED INSPECTION...

all the paperwork has been approved and I now have the Flight Authority. In other words, the project is complete and I'm legal to fly, except that it's winter now and the weather is the crap...
